OK, I understand. I would have been happy to adjust the schedule on your end, but so be it.

Dear Judd,

Thank you for reaching out to me; as previously indicated, please ensure you email my address of record (ecf@randazza.com) when making these types of request or otherwise giving notice.

[REDACTED]

As to your first point, I am sorry to hear you are under the weather. You will find that I am generally inclined to extend courtesies, but I cannot do so to my prejudice. The Thanksgiving holiday already limits my ability to respond, and I would be doing my client a disservice to agree to anything that extends when the pending issues will be resolved and the case unsealed. Thus, while you should expect that I will likely assent to other such requests, I am unable to agree to this one.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Jay Wolman

I think meeting each other definitely took the temperature down, and I think we can each cease our letter writing campaigns and deal cordially with each other as, I suspect, we usually deal with other lawyers.

In that spirit, I write with respect to two matters:

1. I just finished a trial on Friday, and my immune system collapsed. I am feeling terribly ill. Will you consent to moving the date for my sj and preliminary injunction papers to 11/21? Needless to say, I will give appropriate courtesies to you if you ever need them (as is my practice anyway).
